. As of this writing version 2. Liberate Minnesota Narrows the Gap in the Homicides of African-American Men Racial and gender injustices are rampant in the world, and it is long past time for Minnesota to end the violence against young black men. Unfortunately, the murder of African-American men is one of the ways that whites can oppress African-Americans while making a feel good about themselves. The murder of African-American men is one of the more insidious methods of oppressing blacks because it is a way for whites to overcome their guilt by victimizing another minority. It is long past time to end the denial of how many African-American men are murdered each year. This is not a black on white crime but a hate crime. It is time to end the murder of our young men and see how many white men are victims in the same manner. See this website for more in depth information: Why "I Love HN" Became Popular - 99th ===== maxden " _The key point here is that in the context of the group, "I Love HN" is a statement of that person's affiliation to the group, not an expression of individual identity. " _I guess in an anti-technological community where it's considered clever to be anti-technological (at the very least anti-Google) the community will definitely adopt a pro-Google counter-identity of I Love Google. And since Google is the standard by which today's technology is judged, as a community it's probably not a bad idea to adopt that identity. However, the phrasing just seems a little off given that it is a phrase that presents in a positive way, while at the same time might downplay the actual impact of the product that the community is complaining about. I'm very pro-Google, so I love Google -- it's a great company and there is no denying it's impact. I think the community should be a little more careful about choosing phrases like this, though, and it 3da54e8ca3
