How to warm a baby in a sling in cold weather and. In young children during the period of active growth (which falls on 12-13 weeks of intrauterine development), the skin becomes very sensitive and susceptible to temperature changes. If your baby was born after the 12th week of pregnancy, labor can begin very quickly (even within a day!) - as a result, the baby may not "get up". In such cases, resuscitation necessitates the installation of a ventilator for the child (if the child is viable). In the case of a viable child, but without signs of life or infection, it is necessary to carry out urgent resuscitation. As a rule, with the development of preeclampsia in women at a late stage of pregnancy (and without its complications), a child on the 7-10th day after birth has every chance of surviving, but further life support for the child up to 14 weeks can cause serious complications for the mother, as well as for the fetus. An increase in blood pressure, loss of consciousness, convulsions, and shock occur in almost all women who have at least a slight preeclampsia. Preeclampsia has some similar symptoms to angina pectoris, although this disease is much more dangerous and requires more medical intervention. The severity of gestosis is different, and can range from mild to severe. With the beginning of the improvement of the condition, most often after 2-4 days, he must prescribe a strict self-treatment - and this will be competent. At the same time, it is necessary to support all excretory systems, especially the kidneys (special diuretic drugs are required). As for the removal of metabolic products from the body, diuretic-drinking systems (hydrocolonotherapy) should also be used for this. In diseases of the liver, this organ suffers, and in diabetes, the pancreas suffers. For the correct treatment of gestosis, you need to individually approach each case. Therefore, if you are on maternity leave, do not self-medicate yourself, and inform the doctor who is observing you. After you return home (without subsequent complications), you must calm down, make a diet and follow it. Be sure to visit your doctor at the antenatal clinic at the end of parental leave, and tell us what you had. Treatment of gestosis and should be systematic and thorough. The diet should be strictly observed
