Keep an eye on the "classroom" section in your web browser as it becomes increasingly cluttered with these tutorials for Photoshop. Desktop Architecture Photoshop is commonly installed on your computer as a stand-alone program. However, if you want to use a graphics tablet, you can do so with the Photoshop application. This will give you the benefit of working directly on the photographs you are taking with a tablet. GEM IN THE ROUGH: Setting Up Photoshop Getting Started As a new Photoshop user, you may be wondering whether it would be worth the time and money to invest in the Photoshop application. Photoshop includes two versions: Photoshop CS4 Extended and Photoshop CS5. CS4 is a very expensive program, costing thousands of dollars, so you're probably wondering if you really need to invest in this version. With so much to do in Photoshop, you may be wondering how much time you want to spend on learning how to use the program. In my opinion, it's worth the investment. You will spend hours — many hours — learning how to use the program and using it efficiently and effectively. After all that time, you can say you got your money's worth. If you have the time to invest, I recommend that you give Photoshop a try. Using Photoshop in a New York Studio To work in the New York studio, I've found the following guidelines to be useful: Always have your computer set up for maximum efficiency when working with Photoshop. This includes a large monitor and a solid computer (I recommend a solid computer from the start), which is easier to upgrade later, and great-quality speakers that you can close to your computer if you want to get some work done while you listen to music or a podcast. Turn off your computer when you're not working in Photoshop. Doing so frees up your computer and saves power. The hard drive and memory are also never left idle, which can be useful if you have a very large file to edit. I recommend that you keep your computer on while you're not working, but turn it off while you're editing. Photoshop includes most of the components you need to create the majority of commercial-quality print publications. I recommend that you obtain a graphics tablet to work efficiently in Photoshop. Keep in mind that you're spending hours in Photoshop, so don't become a slave to it! Use the Photoshop drop-down menus to save your projects. This will ensure

However, they are not the same as it takes quite a different technique to learn Photoshop, as the Photoshop is quite vast. This is the most important part of learning the Adobe Photoshop, as even if you are familiar with the programs, you will be required to learn a different way to use each program. The most important thing is to learn the name of the tools, how to use the tools, and the shortcuts. You must take a long time to master the Photoshop, and will also need to practice a lot to get the best results. Creating New Images It is also important to be able to create a new image, so that you can keep on modifying and editing the existing images. This can be done in different ways. The first way is by creating the images as layers. The layers are transparent, and you can add layers of different colors, textures, etc., and design a masterpiece. The advantage with Photoshop layers is that you can delete them by simply pressing the delete button. The second way is to make the image in Photoshop Elements, and then save it into a format that can be opened in Photoshop. You can save the images

Tracheal bronchiolo-alveolar carcinoma. A case report. The case of an 80-year-old man with tracheal bronchiolo-alveolar carcinoma is presented. This uncommon tumor, which has previously been reported only in the lung, must be distinguished histologically from other tracheal tumors. The most characteristic features of the tumor are the presence of two types of cells--the tumor cells and the epithelial cells lining the alveoli, which express cytokeratin but not alpha-fetoprotein.This blog is about the esthetics of the human face, and about its philosophical dimension. It is a result of my research on cosmetic surgery, aesthetics, and ethics. Visit the links on the right for details. Saturday, September 05, 2008 Pregnancy Hi there! Been a while since I wrote last. Here are a few thoughts about pregnancy and the raising of a child. The subject interests me, for no other reason that it is my future. So, these are jumbled thoughts. I may or may not flesh them out any further. Most women who are pregnant don't have much difficulty making aesthetic judgments about the state of their own bodies. Why? There is a lot of anecdotal evidence that women view their bodies as utilitarian, that is, for functioning. If that is the case, then there is no aesthetic problem with who looks what. Whether you look like a fully-formed adult and a good-looking one, well, who cares? The point is that you are alive, and you are alive. This is the reason that many women with breast problems are quite confident about what they look like. The point is that people are not perfect. One of the things that makes aesthetics about the esthetics of the human face are subjectivity and irregularity. That is, a person cannot be judged for their appearance. Rather, one person's aesthetic judgment is always relative to some other person or persons. This is the esthetic problem with pregnancy. It is going to be judged from two different points of view. It will be judged by the mother as a project that she is undertaking. The judgment will be made in terms of whether the birth is a success or failure, whether it was done "right" or "wrong". Then there will be a judgment by the child about her mother. Is she a good mother, what kind of a mother she is, and so forth.

Yeah I'm late again...been a little busy...one of those days. Hope you've got a spooky good day planned! I'm featuring all of the kiddos tonight in a special way...so many personalities to share with you..I hope you enjoy them. My hubs has always been the jack-o-lantern guy in our family, so thats what we celebrated. They aren't actually jack-o-lanterns.. they are just fruit, but I love them for the spookiness they bring to a room. These are the cutest in the bunch, and my hubby has a green thumb, so these came ready to go in no time. They just add fun and color to your home, I absolutely love it. The orange ones are a little brighter than the others...but they are cute. Our kiddos always love to just run in and out of the bath so we made sure we had a new journal handy for them to decorate with. I printed the journal out, but you can create it using stickers if you choose. I saw this idea on Pinterest awhile back...but I'm not sure who originally did it, as I just found it by accident on one of my own mommy boards. I have to commend the idea...it has really made for some fun projects for the girls to do with me. This idea would make a great Halloween treasure hunt...or for school. I hope you'll hop over to the other posts and see what the kiddos are up to this week. Don't forget to enter the giveaway in the lower left sidebar. It is always
