Megan McKeown, senior producer, Thunder Meadows Megan McKeown has been producing for Thunder Meadows for the past two years. Thunder Meadows is a charitable organization that helps the homeless in America with help from community members and businesses. "I work for an outside agency called Tulsa Homeless Outreach that's a non-profit that helps the homeless. We're just starting a little recycling program for the homeless and we were looking for people who were willing to work for free during the lunch hour to collect plastic, cans and newspapers. Thunder Meadows had these plastic bins and they were really hot. They're blue plastic and cans, so the only place I would think someone would put them would be in the yard where they don't do anything. That's how I got involved with them." McKeown said. McKeown began working at Thunder Meadows at the beginning of August and she said she had some misconceptions about volunteering at the drop-in center before she started. "I was thinking I would work at the drop-in center, but it's really a lot more than that. There are, like, 300 beds there and if you sleep at the drop-in, you have to stay the night. The drop-in center is full all the time, it's booked up and the drop-in center isn't a place for someone to sleep." McKeown said the people at Thunder Meadows make a great community because they help with each other. "There's a process where you have to go through and you have to have proof you're homeless before you can even start and then after that, you have to do this process to get your own bed and all that kind of stuff and then you have to prove you're sober. You have to do those things to get your own bed at the drop-in center and I think that shows that the people there are willing to help out others." Thunder Meadows will be having its annual autumn blood drive on Thursday, Oct. 1. McKeown said the blood drive is important because blood donors save lives every day and after donation, donors can get $20 off their next blood donation. "The blood drive is done by banks and individuals and you can come to their business during normal banking hours and donate. You can donate as many times as you want and it's done like that for a few months," McKeown said. McKeown has started a music group with

A high-level, open-access review of radiotherapy commissioned by Cancer Research UK. The use of radiotherapy to treat cancer in people is ubiquitous throughout the world. However, there are concerns about the effects of radiation on long-term risks of heart and brain health in cancer survivors. The Union of International Cancer Control (UICC) recommends that clinical guidelines for radiation oncologists include formal evaluation of potential radiation risks. To give radiation oncologists a means to address potential risks of radiation, we have taken the best available scientific evidence and created a comprehensive review of the risks of radiation-induced heart disease and brain damage from radiation therapy. The review has been broken down into a series of visual bullet points for easy navigation. The AMQLE was structured to: promote information sharing on research priorities; enhance opportunities for people with lived experience of mental illness to be involved in research and to learn about the care they receive; provide a forum for research and practice practitioners from a range of roles to share their views and work collaboratively; nurture
