A: I wouldn't recommend trying to find a way to do this. Doing it with a category / wishlist type system is the way to go. You will then only have to allow customers to see their own wishlist items and your wishlist categories. I'm not 100% sure how the actual wishlist system works. I've never actually been asked to create one so I can't comment on how well they are designed. But I do know that you can create a wishlist for your own store. See the link below.

Q: Is there a way to post a data to the server from android device without user interaction? I know that it is possible to post data to the server from a android device with the following code but, is there anyway that I can make it be done only after the app run and no human interaction? Request request = new Request.Builder().url("").post(body).build(); A: You can write a Service that listens for your custom event that is only run once in the lifetime of your app. An example of a "background service" would be a location manager that listens for user location updates to be performed on an interval. Q:

How do I perform database updates inside my unit tests? I'm using the Uninitialized framework and I have a ModelFactory class that allows me to customize my models. How do I prevent the use of static fields from updating my database as my tests run? @Cleanup("MySQLSchemaManager.sql") static SchemaManager schemaManager = new MySQLSchemaManager(); [Fact] public void UpdateSomething() { MockUser.WriteSomethingToTheDatabase(); Assert.True(MockUser.ReadSomethingFromTheDatabase()); } The first time I execute this test, I expect the database to be cleaned of all changes that have been made. I'm getting an error telling me that MySQLSchemaManager.sql has been deleted and needs to be recreated. How can I execute the sql 3e33713323
