not something that they can ignore. As my friend and fellow Sydney painter Susie Courtenay once told me, “When you are accepted into the ‘gang’ you live in a bubble. Then you get out and realise how much privilege that you have enjoyed.” Most artists I know believe that they have come from privilege. They have an education that is commensurate with their parents’ education and social standing. They have somewhere to live and somewhere to work. But they do have the worry that they are in a position where the bubble they are living in is about to burst. There is a feeling of inevitability about that bubble bursting because of the high costs of living in Sydney. I read an article recently where people were told that the average Sydney rent was $800 a week!

That sounds not too bad compared with those of us in the Western Suburbs who pay $800 to $1000 a week in rent. But remember, prices are rising all the time. I live a 15 minute walk from the CBD in Paddington. If I moved to Darling Point or Mos 09e8f5149f
