Drinks is a open-source, peer-reviewed, software library offering encryption (also known as steganography), digital-signing, decryption, and privacy-enhancing services for both client and server-side applications. It is free and open-source software. Free for all use and free of charge! All are welcome to use. It is released under a free licence. Furthermore, it is released under the GNU General Public License (GPL), version 3, which allows for modification and redistribution. The project has received a lot of press and attention within the open-source community and is often cited as an example of the importance of encrypting sensitive information as well as how secure computer programs can be without the use of off-the-shelf hardware or proprietary encryption algorithms. In early 2008, all components of its source code were made available under the GPL licence and Drinks software is now being distributed under the GPL. Drinks has been installed in many millions of computers and used to provide secure encryption and decryption capabilities for many years. More information about Drinks. I've created a series of thematic boxes to guide us on the journey of the year in 2011. Each day there will be a new one and as each day passes, we look back and then make a mental note on what it is we are doing differently for the coming year. With that in mind I thought I'd share with you what I've actually written in there so far - and also a small exercise to get you thinking about that theme of yours and how you plan to make it a reality. We are all entitled to do with our lives what we wish and if you don't believe in it, don't be afraid of it and do it. I've decided to believe and I will be daring and do it. And so will you.
