Electronic gaming machines such as slot machines have become one of the more exciting aspects of the gaming industry. Players become accustomed to playing a wide variety of games on the gaming machines and enjoy the enhanced gaming experience that interactive video gaming machines can provide. In many cases, the excitement of playing a game on a gaming machine can be attributed to the ability to win cash or credits while playing the game. The credits can be used by the player to place additional wagers on the gaming machine. The ability of the player to win cash or credits adds to the player's enjoyment of the game. One feature that has begun to appear in some video gaming machines is the display of indicia such as graphic displays of reels, symbols, or other representations of video poker cards. These displays can be used to generate winning card games such as video poker tournaments. For example, in the game known as "CLUE," a player is dealt a number of cards including five cards from a standard deck of playing cards and a final card. In CLUE, the players works with a group of cards to guess the final card. The player who guesses the final card correctly is a winner in the game. Other winning card games include different variations of CLUE wherein winning cards are dealt to players. Winning card games such as CLUE have become more popular and have greater payout percentages than video poker games. Unfortunately, potential players must be attracted to the games to keep the casino business or the games can become uninteresting to potential players. To keep players interested in games, casino operators continuously attempt to come up with new and exciting features or schemes which can be added to games and different games. Ideally, the excitement of the game would continue even when players are not actively playing the game. When players leave the casino and return, 3da54e8ca3
