Project ASCII is a text editor utility that can provide extra functions and options compared to the standard Notepad in Windows. Although its role is to enable you to edit text, you will be happy to learn that the tool also allows you to execute scripts that you write or paste directly. Once you are done with your code, you can execute it in Batch directly in Command Prompt or in Python. A nice thing about the tool is that you can customize the colors of the background and text, thus making your working environment less distracting. The utility also comes with a Mega Backup feature, which according to the developer enables you to copy work from multiple devices at once. The idea behind the tool is to offer a few extra options that you are likely to miss with the traditional Notepad. For the time being, the app is still being developed and even though they are not currently available, the app promises to have several handy options in the features, such as find and replace, for instance. Among the other tools that the developer intends to add later on, you can count a FTP upload, Hippy File-Scroller and Keylogger Detection, if you prefer to perform tasks via automation.
