What's new:

Electrical properties of six rat liver cell lines: the effects of size, composition, and shape. A wide range of sources have been used in the cell culture of rat liver. Since these cells have small dimensions (approximately 10 microm), it is of interest to know which type of media is best suited to support their propagation. For this purpose, several rat liver cell lines have been established in primary culture; in particular, viability and growth characteristics were studied to clarify their suitability for use in different assays. When the cell lines were exposed to a range of current densities (0.1-8.3 mA/cm<sup>2</sup>), the Balb/c-3T3, Rat-1, and Joko cells showed voltage-activated Na+ and Ca<sup>2+</sup> currents. Rat-1, Balb/c-3T3, and Joko cells also exhibited voltage-activated K+ channels. Rat-1, Joko, and Fao produced a small outward conductance upon hyperpolarization, whereas a large inward K+ current was recorded in Rat-1, Joko, K7, and Mc-ARC cells. Viability was measured using seven kinds of well-established biomarkers. All cell lines retained their viability in primary culture for a period of at least 36 days. Based on cytochemical evaluation of histiocytosis, Balb/c-3T3 cells exhibited a high propensity for phagocytic activity. Phagocytic activity was greater in Rat-1, Mc-ARC, Joko, and K7 cells than in Rat-1 cells. Rat-1 cells were the most suitable for proliferating studies, since these cells are fusiform in shape and have a large volume. The current experiments demonstrate the value of cell line selection, with subsequent optimization of the type of media required for cell propagation. Effects of nanoscale TiO<sub>2</sub> fillers on the tensile performance of poly(lactic acid). The development of biodegradable materials with improved mechanical properties and performances is of great interest. In the present study, two kinds of nanoscale TiO<sub>2</sub> fillers were incorporated into poly(lactic acid) (PLA) to develop a biodegradable composite. The effects of the nanoscale TiO<sub>2</sub> fillers on the tensile, Izod impact and thermal properties of PLA were studied. The nanosized TiO<sub>2</sub> fillers

We're starting to notice some trends over time, and the top ten is made up of factions that will surprise you. 1. Russian T-34 vs Germany Tiger With six Germany and two Soviet Union tanks on the Top 100 List, and four Soviet tankmen on the Top 50, there's a strong emphasis on vehicles from the motherland. Except for the T-34, which is actually the most common vehicle in the game, all other tanks are either World War II vehicles or the vehicles of the Soviet Union, Russian Empire, or the USSR. The two T-34 on the Top 100 list is surprisingly one of the few rivalries on the list. Both the German Tiger and the Russian T-34 are mighty beasts that each have their own strengths and weaknesses. And while the Tiger can out-accelerate and out-arm fire the T-34, the Russian hull was much harder to penetrate. Also, the T-34's 70mm gun had an amazing rate of fire and penetration. When you look at the list of awards, it's also the only tank that won three different awards. 2. British 76mm vs Soviet T-100 The British armored division was made up of tanks from World War I, World War II, and even the early '50s. While there were some tanks from the first two world wars, the British mostly used World War II vehicles. One tank that didn't win any awards is the Soviet T-100 tank, but the campaign for #1 in the Top 100 has the British cruiser troop tank running away with it. For the first three events in Top 100, the cruiser only won two out of the seven awards. The two awards it won were the Tank Destruction and the Capture awards. The cruiser was also the only tank to drop tank a plane. While the vehicle uses the 76mm gun, its main firepower is the use of frontal armor. The T-100 tends to run away at first, but the 76mm guns have a bit of recoil and the T
