Manage cookie settings The aim of the feature is to provide more accurate movements for opponents, which in turn should make the game more skill-intensive, not unlike the way dribbling and passing in FIFPro World XI players work. It is one of four new features introduced in this year's instalment of EA's football series. These features are described in-depth below. Performance-Based Conditioning Rather than training players in a standard gym, FIFA uses a system called "Performance-Based Conditioning." It works by comparing and analysing a player's performance in real-life and virtual environments. The system can determine if a player is over-trained or under-trained in any area of the game. To check the player's progress, the system simulates the effect of the player being injured. It then compares the performance of that player during the simulation with what is expected for their actual performance following the injury. If a player's actual performance is significantly better than what was expected, then they will be deemed to be well-conditioned. The system then changes their training to "Get Even Better" until the player matches what was expected. It's a set-up that's intended to ensure the most effective training for each individual player, rather than having them train in one big group. Team Building As well as this system, which looks at an individual player, Fifa 22 Torrent Download also looks at the team as a whole. It uses a "Development Score" calculated from a player's "development potential," which is a combination of their attributes and a measure of effort. The system can be customised in-game to show different potential, so that each individual player can see the absolute best and worst results in the game. Pressure Sensitivity This feature has been introduced for the first time in FIFA's history, and makes the game play slightly differently depending on what area of the pitch a player has been in. For example, a player who is playing deep-lying midfield will have to be quicker on the ball when a game-changing pass is played out of defence to the wing or behind them, as the recipient will have to get back to the pitch quickly to get the ball and make the necessary run. What's new in Fifa 22:

- FIFA Player Ratings - three rating categories are introduced to FIFA including skill, physicality and strength. Players are assigned to a rating group (from low to high) by EA, which determines how their real-life performance matches up to this rating group and whether they're a PR player, high-minded defender or speedy midfielder. Everyone starts out as a "Fresh Talent" and plays according to their rating.
- PA Option in Training - On the field and during training, you can select which way the ball needs to spin to produce realistic passes and shots.
- Predefined Styles - A new option allows players to pre-design their formation in the global Customise menu.
- Complete Pass-by-play Visualization - Players now actually look like they pass the ball while getting shot at. Pass-by-play animations, like sliding one way and the next, now feature in-game.
- Online Seasons - Online Seasons allow you to play in friendly matches together while honing your skills. Players can pick players or clubs to join, and also undertake match simulations to win and level up.
- More player editing controls - Players can now create their own editing settings from the Menus and with the in-game menu. It's now possible to change player attributes (height, weight, number of training sessions per week) and kit colours.
- New language support
