Happened to me a few times, and I'm not ashamed to admit it. YTV runs a great Twitter poll that lets you vote once per hour on whether you'll miss this or that show. And if you have, there's a certain amount of nostalgia that comes with realizing that this show was/is about to end. I can't really say that I don't miss current programming, since the Canada Screen Awards were the last time I actually watched True North, but I still remember the exact moment my season six viewing time was going to come to an end. You might want to fill out the poll a few times, because I'm going to ask you all what I'll miss when The Adventures of Pete and Pete ends in May. If you want to see what other shows I'd like to see on YTV after Pete finishes (ie. Battlestar Galactica, Day 6, and Wild Card), you should fill out the poll as well. The whole thing is a bizarre, fun look at what Canadians will miss. This is really my favourite thing the YTV Twitter account does (and I really, really should watch the show). You can view the Twitter poll here, and cast your vote by following the link. Is it supposed to be a sad panda if you have? I'm going to miss the nostalgia of the radio show.
