* _Photoshop_ : We will use Photoshop for a large portion of the projects in this book. The layers panel and color palette are essential tools. The study of Adobe Photoshop is a complex topic, but it is covered in a number of books, including _Adobe Photoshop CS_ by Arnold Schwartz. However, we will leave you with a few good places to start: * _Mastering Photoshop_ by Scott Kelby: Scott's books are good quality and free for readers. His website (www.scottkelby.com) provides a wealth of good tutorials and free content for those interested in learning Photoshop. Scott's Photoshop and Lightroom video tutorials are available through YouTube (www.youtube.com). * _Photoshop CS_ by Arnold Schwartz: This is the big book that introduces the concepts of Photoshop CS, the digital photography and retouching processes. You can find it at lots of places on the Internet and print on your own if you want. You will find the concepts of layers and masks in some of the book's practical applications. * _Adobe Photoshop CS_ by John Molnar: This book introduces the concepts of Photoshop CS by exploring them in the context of photographs. John Molnar's books are very well written and a good place to start for anyone who has never used Photoshop before. * _Digital Photography For Dummies_ by Thomas Ryan and Chris Thomas: This book is aimed at photographers, but it is a good introduction to using Photoshop with a workflow approach. ## Hardware Every edition of this book you read will be provided with a video that explains how to use certain software tools. We will also provide a list of the computer system requirements for each project.

The Denver Broncos are not expecting to play their 2017 playoff games in the new stadium, which could be a stumbling block for returning to the postseason. Construction has been stopped on the new stadium, with completion unlikely until the summer of 2018. Broncos CEO and former owner Pat Bowlen signed off on the deal in 2000, guaranteeing the team would play at least four of its next six games in the 97-year-old stadium. The Broncos play the New England Patriots at home on Monday night and the Kansas City Chiefs on Sunday. Both teams are vying for one of the four teams with byes in the wild-card round. In two other home games, the Tennessee Titans are hosting the Seattle Seahawks and the Miami Dolphins host the Baltimore Ravens. "I don't think it's in our interest to look at a two-game home schedule," Broncos executive vice president of football operations John Elway told the Broncos Radio Network. "I think it's in our best interest to look at games in the community, to have a strong community presence and to have a strong connection to the game. So, I think the two games against Kansas City would be important. Broncos quarterback Trevor Siemian agreed, telling ESPN, "I think we need to be in there and play in front of our fans." The Broncos are currently ranked No. 1 in the AFC and, like the Patriots, are 10-3 at home this season. With the team set to play at least four of their next six home games in the new stadium, there's a good possibility they could have home-field advantage throughout the postseason. However, this could backfire on them if the Las Vegas Raiders beat the Steelers and San Diego Chargers beat the Minnesota Vikings on Sunday, creating a two-team tie for the top seed in the AFC. In that scenario, the Broncos would have to play the Raiders twice at the new stadium during the Wild-Card round.After producing stage plays, Michael Sloane decided that the best way to take his concept to the next level was to produce a musical. And so he did, just in time to kick off the fall musical season at the National Theater in Ottawa. Sloane has become something of a producer's dream: a gifted director, writer, arranger, orchestrator, and musician who knows how to make a production come alive. And though his current show, Welcome to Our Stage, presents a sort of romp through a high

What's New In?

• Temple with ruined main hall was designated a U.S. National Monument in 1970 • Formally buried an estimated 75 priests • Guenter Hermann, 118 other men buried in common pit • Site protected by steel pyramid The ancient site of the first Catholic temple in America was designated a National Monument in 1970, and the remains of many of its ancient inhabitants were still intact when the U.S. government took its act. The temple at the heart of the ancient Salt Lake City was formally buried, without ceremony, during the third week of September 1970, when it became a U.S. National Monument. The ancient site had already been designated a National Monument in 1960, so the formal burial of the remains in the Mormon Temple has never been anything more than a suggestion. Even when officials from the U.S. Department of the Interior's National Parks Service, which oversees the site, resisted early suggestions of a burial, the idea has never been entirely dead. It has resurfaced with a vengeance over the last few years. In 2010, Salt Lake City officials began raising money for the construction of a pyramid designed to protect what is left of the remains of its ancient inhabitants -- or at least to protect them from the elements and looting. The pyramid's construction, which has taken nearly three years to complete, is the final installment of a "spiritual reawakening" begun by the city's mayor in 2006, according to a local Fox News affiliate. But it will still only encapsulate about 75% of the remains of the ancient inhabitants of the Salt Lake temple -- it will not be able to protect the remaining 25% from the elements or looting, much less the attack of looters. That security -- so important to the U.S. Department of the Interior -- will not be provided. At least not in the foreseeable future. And that is a major concern for the city of Salt Lake City. The pyramid, named the "Dead Man's Pyramid," will never be completed. The complex is expected to cost hundreds of thousands of dollars. If the cost estimate is correct, that leaves only about $800,000 of Salt Lake City money left for the pyramid. So when Salt Lake City has spent tens of millions of dollars -- close to $100 million, some estimates have said -- and about $3 million of private donations to construct a tomb for its ancient residents, the city has no money to build another tomb. Nor can
