AGOGAMA: Mary Jaya Rajagopal, who was hanged last evening for allegedly snatching a cell phone of a student in Agogama in 2010, will be remembered as the child of a middle class family. Madi Mary Jaya Rajagopal “She attended the primary school in her village and eventually won an entry for the nearby town’s high school,” said her mother, M. Jaya, who is four years older than her. “Her father, T. S. Rajagopal, a farmer, was trying to help his father, who was unwell, by working as a daily-wage labourer in the fields. However, the results of the 10th standard would have to be sent from another village and he would have to miss her school board. “During that year, my elder daughter died and my younger daughter had a fall and was injured. To take care of her, I took up a work and was not with my elder daughter.” The younger daughter, Madi, was two years old. Her mother, a homemaker, said their family in Machilipatnam faced problems in raising the two children. “There was no ration of food and my husband would go fishing for livelihood. She was not in the habit of bringing up her daughter. She wanted to start her own business.” Dressed in a black dress, Madi stood beside her mother as they recited the Shaala, the prayer, after the hanging. Ajithra Prabhu, a relative, has sought a CBI inquiry into the case. S.Venkateswara Rao, a social reformist, supported the family financially after Madi was given the death sentence. Balasubramaniam, who formed a farmers’ cooperative, also came to the family’s help. “Even after we approached the police, they did not take up the case.” A few days before her execution, Madi told her mother that she was in love with a boy. “On the day of the hanging, she said she was not sad, since it was not a love affair but had gone to a party with a friend.” You are here Andrea Mutti Andrea Mutti is a researcher at the Max-Planck Institute for Evolutionary Anthropology

What's New in the Download Preset Filter Photoshop?

Theresa May's only priority is delivering Brexit, Boris Johnson has said – in an apparent attack on the prime minister's new plan for a 'common rule book' with the EU in the future. The foreign secretary, seen as a possible successor to Mrs May, said she would no longer try to sell a 'limited' Brexit deal to MPs as 'the only option' for leaving the EU. And he said that Mrs May's plan, which is intended to get her Brexit deal through the Commons, would see the UK signing new trade deals with more than 40 countries after a transition period. 'There's only one question that matters to the prime minister at the moment, and that's whether or not we get Brexit delivered,' Mr Johnson told LBC Radio. 'There is no plan B, there is no other option to the plan that we put to the British people, that is for the UK to leave the European Union. 'The only question that matters to the prime minister at the moment is, first, deliver Brexit, and secondly, to start looking at what happens after we leave. I think she's decided that no deal is a price worth paying to leave the European Union.' The comments from Mr Johnson come amid reports that he is furious at Mrs May's plans for a 'common rule book' with the EU in the future, saying that it would lead to Britain staying in the single market. The foreign secretary said it would mean that Britain would have to abide by EU regulations in areas such as labour, employment and environmental legislation. He told LBC Radio: 'It is very clear that the prime minister has no interest in a good economic deal, she's not worried about the economy at all. She does not want a good economic deal because it would lead to a soft Brexit – and a soft Brexit is what she doesn't want at all. 'What she wants is to stay in the single market. She wants to be in the customs union. She wants to be able to sign the Trade Bill, or whatever it is called, and be able to sign it with 40 other countries. Boris Johnson said he saw little point in agreeing a deal with the EU and then a transition period, as it would mean the UK would be bound by a raft of EU regulations (file picture) 'And what she wants to do is to stay in the single market. And that's a route to the borders of Scotland.
