"But the land is being gradually ravaged by the ferocious monsters that were once common. There are monsters of all sorts of types, such as insects and huge worms, and they consume the foods in the human's village, and some monsters even kill the people. The existence of those monsters cannot be overlooked any longer. A large number of people from different villages have gathered, and they all intend to protect the village from those monsters. However, the monsters do not easily show themselves. Perhaps they intend to set a trap for us to leave the village, and for this reason, they have hidden their presence. The many different monsters appear at every corner of this village. It may be more dangerous that we had expected. The humans have gathered their forces, and they are intending to take a stand against the monsters, and it seems that they will begin to fight soon. "Unfortunately, I am one of those villagers. While they started to fight, I still intend to protect the village. However, it is the first time for me to fight against the monsters, and I cannot help but be terrified. I did not expect it to come to this. It seems that they have gathered in large numbers, and they are all attacking. "Aha! It seems that they have discovered me. In this situation, it is the most dangerous moment. Just now, the monsters took aim at me, and they are all aiming for my head. In this moment, I might still be able to avoid being shot. "However, I may be able to kill one of the monsters. I will shoot at my enemies, and I will not let them attack me in this moment. "Yes, for this reason, I bff6bb2d33

Idaho's new electronic Medicaid exchange -- which has been plagued by faulty computers and has still failed to operate properly as a working market, despite the state's insistence that all will be well -- is now offline, officials say. The state said in an e-mail to The Associated Press this morning that the system will remain offline for "downtime checks" until next week. It was one of the nation's first attempts at an online exchange where Medicaid enrollees could compare insurers and buy coverage. Kaiser Health News, a nonprofit news service, reports that the computer system crashed about 11 a.m. Mountain time today, just when it was supposed to start up for the first time. The system is supposed to allow people and their doctors to choose a health insurance plan at the time of enrollment and online, according to the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. Idaho says it took it three years to build the system, and its cost was nearly $1.2 million. The department projected that the average person would enroll online on April 15. "This is a missed opportunity," said Carrie Wofford, director of the Essential Health Program at the Northwest Health Policy Center in Boise, Idaho. But Wofford also said she was glad that Idaho's exchange is finally working. "They just need to make sure it keeps working," she said. Update at 10:50 a.m. ET. Another Department of Health and Welfare Executive: In an interview with Idaho's KTVB-TV, Health and Welfare Secretary Randi McDevitt said it is "not right" to claim that the exchange is fully operational. "We are seeing that about 85 percent of the enrollments are still not working," McDevitt said. "We hope that we get it up to 100 percent operational," McDevitt said. Kaiser Health News reported this morning that the enrollment web site, idacare.idaho.gov, has been experiencing problems since early today. The Associated Press reported that the site was down at about 7 a.m. Eastern time. E-mail correspondence between the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare and The Associated Press shows that this morning, around 11 a.m. Mountain time, the department sent the exchange an e-mail notifying the Idaho governor's office of a problem. "Unable to load the Idaho Exchange website due to errors in the system," the message said. "The problem is being reviewed and a plan to correct
