Tabletop Simulator is a large (2.5GB), crowd-funded, full-featured digital board game. It features all of the elements of an official table top board game, from dice rolls to AI opponents, victory conditions, and rules. The whole point of this is to make a massive digital board game engine that you can download, and play at your own leisure. The idea is that Tabletop Simulator is as versatile as your digital board game library, not constrained by any console platforms or software license restrictions. Simply download the mod, plug in your favorite board game, choose a game mode from within the application, and you're ready to play. It's that simple. There is a much smaller "lite" version of Tabletop Simulator available, which features every game mode except for tabletop battles, but it only has about 50 playable board games as of now. The 2.5GB version has over 200 games at launch, and we are planning to add more as more people download the mod. The project is fully funded, and we plan to deliver the mod in March of 2014. If you'd like to contribute, please see the Kickstarter Campaign page. Features: All the bells and whistles of a digital board game. Works offline, meaning you can play Tabletop Simulator right from your SD card. Simple game play. You can choose from four game modes, including Solo, Coop, and Free Play, and free play mode lets you start new games as often as you like. Easy to learn. Nearly every game is beautifully animated, with a hint of nostalgia. It makes it fun for those of us who grew up with tabletop games. High fidelity graphics. Tabletop Simulator is designed for smartphones and tablets, with a maximum resolution of 1080x1920. The mod uses just over 800MB, with the majority used by the game. You can also play other board games from Tabletop Simulator, such as Catan and Descent: Journeys in the Dark. Works with many other mobile game engines, like aXpire and Evolve. Many hundreds of board games to choose from, including dozens of popular titles like Carcassonne and Talisman. Simple integration with many popular IM services, including:

Yahoo! IM, Viber, Kik, Facebook, and Line. Presets. You can save up to four game states, each with their own randomly generated deck, map, and board. You can then quickly load and play from those

The earth has been infected with a never-before-seen virus. Now it has spread into the human population. The epidemic is called The Syndrome. You're part of the agency, Root Division, tasked with finding the origin of the outbreak and stopping its spread before it kills everybody. With the help of a mysterious character named, of course, Underhero, you must go on a journey into the human heart and mind to unravel the mystery behind The Syndrome...and to save the world. As a journalist, you'll have to experience the positive and negative sides of human nature. You must choose to escape the darkness, or get lost in it... Underhero will feature a mix of third-person shooter gameplay and point & click puzzles, in 2D and 3D environments. Underhero is a serious story, with a serious setting. We want to make sure that the game is just as much fun to watch and play as it is to read. Game Features: 3D environments and characters. Not a lot of traditional shooting. Point & click puzzle game. Hide and Seek and Feeding. Backstory: The Syndrome struck the earth suddenly, spreading to all major cities and towns in a matter of days. Within a week, all of humanity is infected. The Syndrome is rapidly turning people into monsters. Underhero is the story of Sam Emrys, a high ranking secret agent. When the Syndrome strikes, Emrys has nowhere to turn but the agency he works for, Root division. Emrys' story is very different from your typical action hero. Even though his efforts are directed towards the common good, Emrys' is not a courageous hero. He is deeply flawed. A lover, and a father. Emrys has a heart of gold, but he is also very quick to get angry. When Emrys comes across something he doesn't like, he cannot control his anger and he becomes aggressive. He is also prone to fits of paranoia and obsessive thoughts. A terrible combination. Facing this emotional roller coaster, Emrys is also a recovering alcoholic. Emrys is a man trying to cope with the effects of his past. The fact that he is powerless against the effects of The Syndrome makes him even more depressed. Underhero will feature three different endings, depending on how you interact with the world. The Agent Travel the world and experience other cultures through this 'day d41b202975 of Success and Your Never-ending Journey It's difficult to describe what it feels like to have received praise and recognition but to have lost so much of yourself that you feel a disconnect between what you feel and what you are. I remember writing once that the goal of being an author is to name names and make your stories known, and that is the hardest thing of all. It forces you to judge others and to be competitive with them. HPRZ is a mood and state of mind similar to acid which causes you to tunnel outward, outward, outward, and inward; the tunnel becomes your focus while all energy is directed inwards. Soon your career is defined and your aura becomes crushed. The crushed aura then goes outwards, taking others with it. You become defined by others as well as the rejection you suffered from others become your focus. Thus life is difficult, a no win situation. You have accomplished much, but at what price? Another interesting side effect I've noticed from HPRZ is the difficulty people have with giving advice. Advice usually comes from the dears and you don't want to follow their advice, because being a climber of the Mountain and not wanting to give up what you have accomplished hurts you, emotionally. Another hurdle is the sheer amount of knowledge and contacts we have attained and you don't know where to start looking for those things. Often times people will ask you to mentor them or help them find their first sale - all the while feeling that they are in a situation of stupid because when it's their turn to mentor somebody they can't get the courage to even give their opinions because they know they are not as good as you and they fear they will not do as good of a job mentoring you. This self-derogation, which is a common one among climbers, puts these people in a mental place of having not even a chance of ever getting what they want. Well, when you are in HPRZ, regardless of how good you are, how knowledgeable you are, or how much contacts you can make the people around you cannot give a damn about you. They have put their alpha energy on deaf ears. They will not care if you die in a fire, because it does not really affect them. They will probably continue doing the very same things, because for them everything is important, and nothing is important. It is important to them that they don't care and they don'

[TAB] [Youtube Videos][Twitter] Jan. 18, 2012 -- One way to reduce Americans' health-care expenses is by having more people quit smoking. ADVERTISEMENT Nearly 30,000 lives could be saved each year, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention says. If fewer smoking adults stopped using the $210 billion tobacco industry, there would be "significant inflationary pressures on health-care costs," the CDC said in a report released Thursday. "Smoking is one of the leading causes of death in the U.S.

today," said Tom Frieden, director of the CDC. "Many smokers and families pay the cost of smoke-related illnesses with higher medical bills, decreased productivity and lost work days." Tuesday was the first-ever World No Tobacco Day, a campaign by the World Health Organization that is designed to raise awareness about the dangers of smoking and to help countries and regions enact legislation to prevent tobacco use. More than 6 million people die each year from smoking-related illnesses. According to Frieden, the U.S. Institute of Medicine estimate tobacco is responsible for tens of thousands of deaths a year from lung cancer, heart disease, stroke, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, and diabetes. "Cigarette and other tobacco product use is not only deadly, it is also costly," Frieden said in a statement. "Each year, nearly $170 billion are spent on tobacco-related illnesses and premature death in the United States alone." Under the Affordable Care Act, under private insurance the maximum out of pocket cost is generally 2 percent of a covered
