The SEGA GroupBoombtown Ballroom - Santa Monica, CA The Boombtown Ballroom in Santa Monica was built in the 30s and hosts a variety of music venues. It's best known for hosting shows by The Eagles and, of course, the Doors. In 1965 a tumultuous concert billed as "The Doors Are Going On Their Last Tour" happened here. Doors fans and a couple of local Angels decided to turn the show into a riot. The result was a riot that shut down the venue. What's the Bottom Line? The venue was featured in several movies. You can watch some here We Recommend: "Santa Monica's most unique concert venue, the Jazz Bakery. The dimly-lit room is packed with moody images of Hollywood stars; the espresso-colored walls are covered with portraits of Barbra Streisand and other big names." - Charles Shere, LA Times "It's like walking onto a movie set, particularly at night when there are various fires playing off the surrounding buildings. But the place isn't just about watching stars, it's about the scene. The audience becomes part of it." - David Aaronovitch, LA Daily News "Emblematic of the general Los Angeles-casual attitude to what constitutes the city's physical environment, the Vibrasonic Ballroom has elements which make it memorable from the start." - Steve Weintraub, Los Angeles Times "At Black's it is a mark of distinction to own or see a ticket for the Doors show at the Vibrasonic, once the home of rock n' roll's holy trinity." - Peter Richardson, Melody Maker "The Vibrasonic sounded more like a direct line to the cosmos than a concert venue." - Atul Gawande, The New Yorker Rooftop: You can check availability on the Boombtown Ballroom site, and reservations are highly recommended during the popular high season Wheelchair Access: Many of the accessibility issues at the venue were resolved in the last few years and there are nice restrooms and on-site security. However, assistance in guiding wheelchair bound patrons is not available, and any access issues will be at the discretion of management.
