Based on the user interface, features and complexity, AMAR Software recommends this product.Q: Project Euler #2 Python 3 problem 2: For the following input, determine if the set of prime factors of the given number are unique. 54321 17 1314 What I've tried so far is that I have created a list storing the prime factors of each number. Then, I iterate through the list so that it can be passed to a function that checks each time whether it contains the same prime factors. The function then returns True when every element in the list shares the same set of prime factors. def factors(n): factors_list = [] while n > 1: factors_list += [n % i] n //= i return [x for x in factors_list if all(x)] Can anyone help me to make this more efficient and/or check whether my algorithm is valid for this problem?
