What's new in Maze Art: Brown:

The recent announcements on the ED injury protection should be reassuring to all those who are working hard to protect their employees. Last year we saw, before in fact we became all too aware of the fact that Birmingham had the worst injury figures in the entire country. The figures have continued to rise, and indeed in Birmingham they have continued on the path of rising in the national rankings. Once again core numbers show that Birmingham came out way above national practice, and as a benchmark for the rest of the country as a whole. A year on from the trauma agenda for the NHS, the scheme is now on everyone's minds. I was a little frustrated by the time Ed Balls appeared, because after so much waiting for the scheme to get under way, and months of hard work and pressure from students, trades and public, he appeared before the cameras and admitted that the people had the right to go in front of the camera. People want to be able to see that they have my promise, and that they have results. He continued, and pointed to the earlier announcement made by Andy Burnham calling for a review of the future of short consultant posts, which would mean the loss of a huge group of experienced and skilled surgeons in emergency departments and A&E. If other areas don't feel that we are pressing ahead, they can do the same with their own review. We have a 12 week injury protection scheme in place. This scheme has now been in operation for a year. So when should you become eligible? The scheme begins on October 1st 2013, and starts applying to existing employers with new starters either in the course of joining your company or employment up until the end of June 2014. If you are starting a new post after this date you should join at any stage in the scheme. The earlier you join the earlier you can take advantage of full cover, so if you are a police officer or a teacher you must apply before March 1st 2014, when all parts of the scheme cover your post of work. You may then carry on into a scheme which may still include some parts of your post, but which all the doctor cover. You will need to apply again for any part of your year at that time. If you are already in the scheme, you should join from June 1st 2014. Anyone joining after this date should take their own protection policy out of the scheme, as the scheme at the end of June 2014 will be what they are entitled to if they have to work
