Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method and apparatus for printing a seal on a substrate, such as a glass pane. 2. Description of the Prior Art It is known to print indicia, such as alphanumeric characters, on glass panes for use in a variety of applications, such as glass panes in buildings or automobile windshields. Such a glass pane may also be provided with a seal to protect the print from the elements. Conventional methods of applying a seal to a glass pane typically involve applying a monotonous background with a solid color printed on top. However, when printed on a substrate, such as a windshield, having a surface pattern formed therein (e.g., a design), the printed image on the substrate is more visible in the pattern than when printed on a background having a solid color. Thus, although conventional seals printed on a solid colored background result in a print that is more difficult to
