She said that I could download the cracked version from the Q: Headers and cookies when serving a JS file I'm working on a webapp with PyQt4 and PySide and am very frustrated about this one issue. I'm trying to show a gallery by the provision of links to the files of the client and when the user clicks on the files, i would like the user to be redirected to the server to download the file. All works fine as long as the client asks for the JS files with script tags. The current challenge is that some users could send the JS files in the headers and in some cases the user should be sent back to the server so that he could download the files. The current status is that if a js file is sent in the headers (which i would like the user to have the possibility to do) i get nothing. I know that a solution could be to keep the js file in the main html, but this is problematic as if my webapp have several sub websites, i can't remove one. I also know that if the js file is sent with CORS headers, it works (i can even add the url with headers in the config file). This is the JS code that works without any problem. function setImage(url) { return new Promise(function(resolve, reject) { var xhr = new XMLHttpRequest(); xhr.open('GET', url); xhr.responseType = 'blob'; xhr.onload = function() { resolve(xhr.response); };
