The software is a powerful tool for editing audio and video tracks on Adobe Premiere Pro CC.Q: Getting a httpclient object using AsyncTask instead of Activity I'm trying to use a background thread to get an http request in android using AsyncTask as it gives me a more stable ui. My main activity is a Tab activity so it sets the tabhost as the rootview. My activity has 2 buttons I want to use the same code for. The code works fine in the main activity but not in my other buttons. The problem is that I can't get the Context object in the async task class Instead the context is passed in as an object of my main activity which is a Tab Activity. This works fine for the mainactivity but not for the other buttons. I need the httpclient object to use it later on to post data to another page. the Android Documentation say this is why the context needs to be passed as the parent Activity. But I want to use this code in multiple buttons and not only on one. Can you suggest me a way to get the context object of the async task? public class data extends AsyncTask { MainActivity activity = null; public data(MainActivity activity){ this.activity=activity; } protected void doInBackground(Void... params){ HttpURLConnection connection = null; String result = ""; try { URL url = new URL(""); connection = (HttpURLConnection) url.openConnection(); connection.connect
