$\lim_{n \rightarrow \infty} n^2 \log(2n) - n \log(n)$  I tried multiplying the top and bottom by the conjugate of the negative of the top, but that doesn't work. A: I think a reasonable way to go about it is to check the behavior of the following:  $\log(2n) - \log(n) \times \log(2n)$  Q: Caching Simple DB: where to put and how to use? I'm using SimpleDB for a website, which serves a certain amount of static content (HTML, images, css files). I'm using SimpleDB because it allows one to have access to custom resources, which are not directly served by the site (logo, contact form, etc). I now want to use SimpleDB to cache these resources to give some extra performance boost to the site. I haven't found much information about the basic usage of SimpleDB, like what are the parameters I need to use to make my life easier, how to create clients, how to retrieve data, etc. I would like to ask you a few questions about SimpleDB: 1) What kind of parameters would you use to create a SimpleDB client? (database name, user name, password, location, etc) 2) How to retrieve data? (In what kind of query?) 3) How to create data? (In what kind of query?) 6d1f23a050
